defend, and be an ally in the War on Terror. Legislation required for the date has not been enacted. Summary of Achievements and Shortfalls This report provides, consistent with the Act, an assessment of how the Iraqi Government is performing on 18 specified benchmarks, rather than the effects being generated. While remaining levels for the deployed Iraqi units continue to be of concern, the Iraqi Government has provided the equivalent of three additional brigades to Baghdad and has made provisions to sustain this level of effort and to address remaining issues – in addition to steadily increasing the strengths of Iraqi units already deployed in Baghdad. It will take time, however, for improved conditions locally to translate into broader political accommodations at the national level; what is important is the overall trajectory, which, under our present strategy, has begun to stabilize, compared to the deteriorating trajectory seen over the course of 2006. Some Sunni residents of Baghdad continue to believe that Shi'a-dominated National Police units and, to a lesser degree, Iraqi Army units are biased against them. Although the KRG and the Shi'a parties have agreed to the text of the Revenue Management Law, Council of Ministers' approval has been delayed by a Sunni party boycott. The completion of additional JSSs throughout Baghdad should significantly increase the success of this effort. At the same time, we have increased our efforts to help build the capacity of the Iraqi Security Forces (ISF). Iraqi parliamentarians and political parties are considering changes to the electoral laws, but there appears to be no effort that would adversely affect the rights of minorities. Home > News & Policies > July 2007 Printer-Friendly Version Email This Page For Immediate Release July 12, 2007 Initial Benchmark Assessment Report Press Conference by the President National Security Council In Focus: National Security In Focus: Renewal in Iraq PDF (25 pages, 147kb) This report to Congress is submitted consistent with Section 1314 of the U.S. Troop Readiness, Veterans' Care, Katrina Recovery, and Iraq Accountability Appropriations Act, 2007 (Public Law 110-28) (the "Act"). is, or is not, being achieved"), we have carefully examined all the facts and circumstances with respect to each of the 18 benchmarks and asked the following question: As measured from a January 2007 baseline, do we assess that present trend data demonstrates a positive trajectory, which is tracking toward satisfactory accomplishment in the near term? The study also notes "...solving the problem of militias requires national reconciliation" and states that, as a party in the conflict, the United States Government should not be directly involved in a DDR program's implementation. As Congress has requested, in September General Petraeus and Ambassador Crocker will report on these efforts and provide a more comprehensive assessment of the situation in Iraq, including an assessment of the 18 benchmarks measured herein. In most cases, tactical commanders act on mission orders issued by their chain of command or coordinated locally with MNF-I forces. Article 37 of the Iraq constitution guarantees all Iraqis freedom to form and join associations and political parties. However, a general amnesty program would be counterproductive in the current environment. (ix) Providing three trained and ready Iraqi brigades to support Baghdad operations. This is not meant to replace Iraqi efforts to provide security, but to help provide the necessary time and space with which the Iraqi Government can continue to build its own capacity, can intensify efforts against the accelerants of the violence, especially al-Qaida in Iraq and some segments of the Jaysh al-Mahdi (JAM), and can meaningfully address the all-important issue of reconciliation among the various segments of Iraqi society. Execution of the complete 2007 capital budget is a very aggressive target for the Government of Iraq, which expects significant increases in 2007 spending following major initiatives to improve its budget execution processes. The progress toward this benchmark has been satisfactory, and the effects are increased control and security in the areas where these JSSs have been established. The signing of the International Compact with Iraq, an initiative jointly sponsored by the United Nations and the Iraqi Government, and the Expanded Neighbors ministerial conference, with attendance by the Permanent Five members of the U.N. Security Council, the Arab League, the Organization of Islamic Conference, and the G-8, on May 3 - 4 in Sharm el-Sheikh, Egypt, helped provide more public international and regional support for Iraq. While our overarching strategy continues to emphasize a transition of responsibility to the Iraqi Government and its security forces, the New Way Forward recognized that, in response to the upsurge in sectarian violence in 2006, it was necessary for Coalition Forces to temporarily play a greater role, in conjunction with the Iraqi Security Forces, in securing the Iraqi population. Similar trends have been observed throughout Iraq; however, it is too early to determine how sustainable they will prove to be. As provided for in the Act, the President has waived certain restrictions on a portion of these funds in a determination, which is being provided to Congress separately. This of course increases the logistics, services, and combat multiplier (close air support and artillery support) requirements exponentially. While AQI may not account for most of the violence in Iraq, it is the organization responsible for the highest profile attacks, which serve as a primary accelerant to the underlying sectarian conflict. As is normal in any capital budget, a portion of the funds will disburse in future years based on contract progress. For example, there is division among political and ethnic groups regarding what rank of ex-Ba'athists should be allowed to return to civic life. United States diplomatic and military personnel have engaged the Iraqi Government at the highest levels to stress the importance of aggressively targeting all violent groups, regardless of sect or affiliation. (See pages 14-15, above.) Assessment: The Government of Iraq -- with substantial Coalition assistance -- has made satisfactory progress toward reducing sectarian violence but has shown unsatisfactory progress towards eliminating militia control of local security. In cooperation with the U.N., the United States Government is providing program support to the new IHEC in three areas: (i) building immediate IHEC staff capacity, particularly in public outreach and internal organization; (ii) building database capacity that will support the new voter registry; and (iii) standing up provincial, district, and precinct-level election bodies. The Embassy has pressed hard on all political elements to move forward. The U.N. DDR Advisory Mission to Baghdad Report (April 25 - May 2, 2007) stated, "The Iraq environment makes it most unlikely that traditional DDR can take place, and planning should take this into account." Likewise, a State Department internal review has shown that the timing is not right for a full-scale DDR program in Iraq. The CRC has requested an extension to resolve remaining issues, and its Chairman remains committed to moving the process forward. There have been concerns, however, about political interference (though not at the Prime Minister's level) in some operations to target Shi'a extremist networks, especially JAM. An inflexible timeline on this issue could be detrimental, as a bad law would not improve prospects for reconciliation. Introduction Section 1314 of the U.S. Troop Readiness, Veterans' Care, Katrina Recovery, and Iraq Accountability Appropriations Act, 2007 (Public Law 110-28) states that the President is to submit to Congress two reports assessing the status of each of the 18 benchmarks contained in the Act and declaring whether, in the President's judgment, satisfactory progress is being achieved with respect to those 18 benchmarks. U.S. commanders are committed to helping the Iraqi government expand the size of the ISF to make it a more capable counter-insurgency force. Iraqi and Coalition Forces continue to emphasize population security operations in Baghdad, its environs, and Anbar province to combat extremist networks, and create the space for political reconciliation and economic growth. This benchmark is on track for completion at the required time. Coalition military forces also contribute to the operation of joint security stations and provide the embedded transition teams that mentor Iraqi military and police counterparts. The Commission has been established. The necessary preconditions for a DDR program, such as political reconciliation and security provided by the government, do not yet exist despite considerable efforts by the Iraqi Government, MNF-I, and the Embassy. The United States Government encouraged Iraqi political parties to reach a compromise on this law and believes that the 18-month delay in implementation is in the interests of Iraq and the United States, given current political conditions in Iraq. Key economic indicators paint a modestly improved picture -- unemployment has eased slightly and inflation is currently abating. There are still several reports each month of allegations of wrongdoing against ISF members believed to be non-sectarian in their approach to security. Development of ISF capabilities continues to grow while the ISF increases operational tempo for Operation Fardh al-Qanun. There is currently only one JSS in Sadr City, though more are planned and operations have been conducted throughout Sadr City on a near-daily basis. Iran is engaging in similar activities in Afghanistan. (ii) Enacting and implementing legislation on de-Ba'athification reform. Assessment: The Government of Iraq has not made satisfactory progress toward providing Iraqi commanders with all authorities to execute this plan and to make tactical decisions on how sustainable they will prove to be. As provided for in the Act, the President has waived certain restrictions on a portion of these funds in a determination, which is being provided to Congress separately. This of course increases the logistics, services, and combat multiplier (close air support and artillery support) requirements exponentially. While AQI may not account for most of the violence in Iraq, it is the organization responsible for the highest profile attacks, which serve as a primary accelerant to the underlying sectarian conflict. As is normal in any capital budget, a portion of the funds will disburse in future years based on contract progress. For example, there is division among political and ethnic groups regarding what rank of ex-Ba'athists should be allowed to return to civic life. United States diplomatic and military personnel have engaged the Iraqi Government at the highest levels to stress the importance of aggressively targeting all violent groups, regardless of sect or affiliation. (See pages 14-15, above.) Assessment: The Government of Iraq -- with substantial Coalition assistance -- has made satisfactory progress toward establishing the planned JSSs in Baghdad. Effective steps toward national reconciliation will require national leadership from all communities and expression of a common national political will, or "vision," that has so far been lacking. Prime Minister Maliki is willing to take action when evidence of this is clear. While leaders have been discussing the law, a public discussion on the accommodations that different parts of Iraqi society will have to make with each other is not yet underway. The present analysis and assessment of these 18 benchmarks follows. The United States is also negotiating an Acquisition Cross Service Agreement (ACSA) with the Iraqi Government. Although the trend to date is positive, sustaining progress through September to meet this benchmark at year-end requires accelerated spending and procurement activity, which are challenging tasks in the face of capacity constraints and security problems. As the security ministries increase their capacity to support and sustain Iraqi forces, Iraqi units will become more capable of operating independently. Some ministries have developed and are implementing aggressive spending plans (such as the Ministry of Education), and several provinces (Anbar, in particular) are demonstrating their empowerment through their new spending programs. Similarly, some Sunni politicians have made baseless claims against ISF officials, suggesting that unsubstantiated claims of sectarianism can cut both ways. Assessment: The Government of Iraq has made satisfactory progress toward ensuring that the rights of minority political parties in the Iraqi legislature are protected. There are numerous examples where Iraqi presence has facilitated a lower application of force. Other difficult issues remain, significant progress has been made on many substantive issues and technical details involved in the constitutional review process. Assessment: The Government of Iraq has made satisfactory progress toward forming a Constitutional Review Committee (CRC) and then completing the constitutional review. This assessment complements other reports and information about Iraq provided to the Congress and is not intended as a single source of all information about the combined efforts or the future strategy of the United States, its Coalition Partners, or Iraq. The effect of unsatisfactory progress toward eliminating militia control of local security has been negative in terms of perceptions of the authority and fairness of the Government of Iraq. For a follow-on IMF program, Iraq will need to continue increasing fuel prices. Iraq Study Group Recommendation 25 calls for the Iraqi Government to establish milestones for reconciliation and improve security. The benchmark would be fully achieved by allocating and obligating $10 billion of investment capital during this calendar year, along with satisfactory progress on contract disbursements. The provincial government -- for the first time in a year -- is now able to meet in the province and recently approved a comprehensive provincial budget that appropriates virtually all of its $107 million allocation for capital expenditures. In Baghdad, for example, Coalition Forces and ISF have established 30 JSSs to provide an extensive permanent security presence throughout Baghdad's neighborhoods. At the highest levels, the Embassy is urging the Iraqi Government to take the legislative and administrative action necessary to ensure timely and fair elections. Minority political parties in the COR participate in COR activities in a manner consistent with minority parties in other parliamentary democracies. Every day, our Embassy and military officials are working with Iraqis to encourage stability and reconciliation in ways that are not easily measured by these benchmarks. Senior Iraqi political leaders remain at odds over some of the most fundamental aspects of de-Ba'athification reform, including over which categories of former Ba'ath party members would be proscribed by the law. Improved use of these tools to take advantage of localized security gains will require further planning by the Iraqi Government. The ESC is currently in the process of reviewing the law. The CRC has been formed, and, while difficult issues remain, significant progress has been made on many substantive issues and technical details involved in the constitutional review process. Assessment: The Government of Iraq has made satisfactory progress toward establishing an IHEC Commission. The Government of Iraq has made satisfactory progress toward establishing an IHEC Commission. The political blocs still need to reach an accommodation on these difficult political issues. Drafting of the law has just begun. As part of Operation Fardh al-Qanun, Coalition Forces have established over 30 JSSs and almost 30 COPs, throughout Baghdad. In a token of progress, an amnesty workshop was conducted on May 12, 2007, in Baghdad. Thus, while there has been progress, it has been too uneven to warrant a satisfactory judgment at this time. Provincial Elections Date: The Government of Iraq has not made satisfactory progress toward establishing a date for provincial elections. These leaders are charged with supporting moderate elements against extremists in their areas of responsibility and launching projects that have an immediate impact in areas cleared of terrorists and insurgents. Coalition Forces continue the Train-and-Equip program for the Iraqi Security Forces and field advisors to the Ministries of Interior and Defense in order to build Iraqi capacity to manage and sustain forces in the field. In support of the ESC, six sub-committees have been formed to address topics of economics, services, political issues, media, popular mobilization, and security. Over time, we expect bottom-up reconciliation to be reflected in, and latch up with, progress on top-down measures. These stations bring security forces into the neighborhoods and provide the Iraqi populace with a means to deliver valuable information to security forces in order to target groups that incite sectarian violence. In addition, there are more Iraqi units in the field and more being moved around the battlefield. Elections Law: The Government of Iraq has not made satisfactory progress toward establishing a provincial elections law. We are also increasing our efforts to build Iraqi governmental capacity not just at the national level, but at the provincial and local levels as well. The Iraqi Government has shown increased willingness to target and conduct actions against extremist groups and militias, such as Jaysh al-Mahdi Secret Cells, in order to establish a more secure environment in Baghdad. Iraq's Council of Representatives on July 8 voted to extend its present term through July 31, and for working sessions to last 6 days a week from July 16 through July 31 (taking only Fridays off). We presently assess that degrading AQI networks in these critical areas -- together with efforts to degrade Iranian-backed Shi'a extremist networks -- is a core U.S. national security interest and essential for Iraq's longer-term stability. The consensus nature of Iraqi politics, and the checks and balances built into the Iraqi governance structure, inhibit Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki's ability to govern effectively -- and would pose obstacles to any prime minister. As noted above, Coalition Forces, in conjunction with ISF, have established and staffed JSSs in all sectors of Baghdad and are conducting joint operations in once contentious neighborhoods, such as the Shi'a dominated Sadr City and Sunni-dominated Mansour District. The effects of this new emphasis and these new procedures are already being felt, albeit unevenly, across the country. The ISF continues to show slow progress. The CRC presented a partial list of recommendations on May 23, 2007, in an interim report and received an extension from the COR until the end of August to resolve outstanding issues concerning: (i) Presidential powers, (ii) the powers of the regions vs. The final draft of the Revenue Management Law must be approved by the Council of Ministers (COM) and vetted by the Iraqi Government's legal office before submission to the COR. As of June 16, Multinational Division-Baghdad reports 32 JSSs have achieved initial operational capability and 36 COPs have achieved initial or full operational capability. Many of the planned JSS, U.S. Combat Outposts, and other patrol bases have been established across Baghdad and the surrounding area. The good news is that individual units have demonstrated the ability to act as responsible partners when employed with Coalition influence, and some Iraqi commanders have demonstrated clarity that they are Iraqis first. These incidents have shown a decrease in May and June, which may be the result of aggressive Coalition and Iraqi operations into former AQI havens. The regions law has been passed. In addition, the ISF has done a reasonably good job policing its own ranks by reporting infractions and removing guilty parties. Congressional Benchmarks This background discussion provides a context for assessing the performance of the Iraqi Government with respect to the 18 benchmarks. These combined operations -- named Operation Phantom Thunder -- were launched on June 15, 2007, after the total complement of surge forces arrived in Iraq. Alternatively, allowing former Ba'athists who do not accept a democratic Iraq into the government or security services could undermine the Iraqi government and embolden the insurgency. Economics and Essential Services: The economic picture is uneven. Minorities are guaranteed equal access to and participation in elections for the COR. We see little change in Iran's policy of seeking U.S. defeat through direct financial and material support for attacks against U.S. military and civilians in Iraq. Provincial Reconstruction Teams (PRTs) are monitoring political and security conditions in provinces that may affect elections. New legislation or amendments to the existing law are required to set a date and secure funding for elections, as well as to establish the electoral system to be used for the vote, among other issues. Section 1314 (b)(1)(A) The United States Strategy in Iraq, hereafter, shall be conditioned on the Iraqi Government meeting benchmarks. From this small workshop, 10 recommendations were developed and forwarded to various government representatives for comment, thus beginning a dialogue on amnesty. Because the MOD is only partially effective at managing ministry functions, the Coalition continues to assist with fielded Iraqi Army forces. The resources and personnel currently dedicated to the DDR effort would be better used elsewhere in the process of reconciliation that will ultimately lead armed groups to lay down arms. In Recommendation 38 and 39, the Iraq Study Group proposes that neutral international experts act as advisors to the Iraqi Government and that the United States Government fund and support a single office to provide assistance to these experts. Despite casualty rates two to three times that of Coalition Forces, Iraqi Security Forces continue to fight bravely for their country. (xviii) Ensuring that Iraq's political authorities are not undermining or making false accusations against members of the ISF. Iraq Study Group Recommendations 20 and 21 call for the Iraqi Government to shoulder a greater share of the security mission in Iraq, and ultimately take it over. The New Way Forward strategy makes de-Ba'athification reform an integral part of the United States Government's Iraq policy. While progress toward this benchmark at this time is unsatisfactory, and the resultant effect has been negative in terms of overall perceptions of performance, this does not necessitate a revision to our current plan and strategy, under which we continue to improve Iraqi command and control capabilities, and expand our embedding and partnership with Iraqi units. The number of suicide and SVBIED attacks in March and April approached all-time highs, further exacerbating sectarian tension and making political deals more difficult to close. An expanded use of embedded U.S. military and police advisor teams has also ensured that the ISF now receive greater exposure to modern policing techniques that are both more effective and in compliance with international human rights standards. At the provincial level, the economic governance picture is a patchwork, with some provinces performing better than others. Help safeguard democracy in Iraq by encouraging strong democratic institutions impartially serving all Iraqis and preventing the return of the forces of tyranny. The COR enacted a law in October 2006 that establishes procedures to form regions. We will be working closely with Iraqi leaders and members of the Council of Representatives to move important pieces of legislation forward during this time frame -- taking account of the extended legal process mandated by Iraq's constitution for moving a law to final passage. Implementation of this legislation should take place after provincial elections are held and after the passage of an updated elections law. An apparent decision earlier this year by the Jaysh al-Mahdi (JAM) militia to largely stand down its operations appeared to have a temporary effect, but a breakdown in Muqtada al Sadr's ability to control JAM -- or elements thereof -- coinciding with the return of JAM fighters from Iran after receiving training in combat and explosives has spawned a recent increase in attacks on Coalition and Iraqi forces.
